

Veterinarian Schoenfeld has retired

10-6-84 Des News

Dr. F. James Schoenfeld, state veterinarian since 1968, has retired, the Utah Department of Agriculture announced.

Schoenfeld was instrumental in establishing the new Utah brucellosis law, which became effective July 1, 1977. As a result, Utah has been free of brucellosis for more than two years.

The Utah cattle industry has benefited, because cattle buyers have confidence in Utah cattle, which makes them easy to transport across state lines and to market.

Schoenfeld earned his bachelor's degree from Utah State University in 1941 and his doctor of veterinary medicine degree from Colorado State University in 1944. He served as a deputy state veterinarian, then a member of the USU staff before taking over Dr. Warren E. Rassmussen's animal practice in South Ogden.

At one time, Schoenfeld was the only large-animal veterinarian serving Weber, Morgan and Davis counties and the south part of Box Elder County.

In 1954, he built the Schoenfeld Large Animal Clinic in Roy and continued to practice alone, with his wife, LaRue, as his secretary and office manager, until 1960 when he was joined by Dr. Chad Widdison. As the practice grew, other veterinarians joined his staff.

Named Veterinarian of the Year in 1977, Schoenfeld has served as president of the Utah Veterinary Medical Association and the Western States Regulatory Veterinary Association. He has been a member of the board of directors of the U.S. Animal Health Association, adjunct professor of veterinary science at USU and chairman of the Golden Spike Coliseum Council.

Veterinarian Attends Conference

11 Oct 1984

Dr. Lee S. Erickson of Heber, Utah attended the recent Fall Conference of the Society for Theriogenology held in Denver, Colorado, September 26-28, 1984.

Thirty outstanding national authorities in the field of animal reproduction from various parts of the world, including the United States and Nigeria, presented papers and technical information on reproductive problems, diagnosis, and treatment. The presentations emphasized equine, bovine, sheep and goats, and small animal reproduction.

Membership in the Society for Theriogenology is restricted to veterinarians who have an interest in the field of animal reproduction. The members are updated through publications and newsletters received periodically from the Society Office.

The Society numbers over 1,800 members in the United States, Canada, and a number of foreign countries.

Dr. Edwin Lindner of Dodgeville, Wisconsin served as President of the Society this past year. Dr. John Simons of Torrington, Wyoming served as Chairman of the 1984 Fall Conference.

Headquarters for the Society are in Hastings, Nebraska.

needs, based on extensive research and evaluation, must be made and prioritized. Then a responsible decision may be made for the good of the entire community."

"I feel the decision making process is the most difficult challenge faced by a School Board member. I am prepared to take these steps in order to make responsible decisions for the betterment of education in Wasatch County."
